Science in the Service of Autism

Autistica Big Give Christmas Campaign

The British Autism Study of Infant Siblings (BASIS) is the only project of its kind in the UK, drawing on expertise from around the UK to carry out the highest calibre of research on baby siblings of children diagnosed with autism. This research will hopefully pave the way for earlier diagnosis and the design of more targeted interventions, which will make a huge difference to the lives of autistic children and their families.

As a research assistant on the project, I carry out the many and varied studies and assessments, working closely with babies and their parents, to gather the incredibly valuable data from which we hope to find early signs, or markers, for autism. Being a parent of a 9-year old autistic boy myself, I not only have a professional, but also a personal dedication to and belief in this project.

Donating to the Big Give is one of the most effective ways in which you could help BASIS, with every pound you donate being matched by the Big Give and Sir Christopher Ball.

Kim Davies, Research assistant, BASIS
